Underdressed to un-impress

Men's mag says Hub is home to worst dressed ◗ Stylist: Hoodies and sports gear have to go ◗ College casual wear contributes to crappy critique

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

▶ Are these fashion plates contributing to Beantown's bad fashion rap?

Boston's colleges campuses are being blamed for GQ naming the Hub the worst dressed city in the country.

The men's magazine said dudes don't know diddily when it comes to fashion, ranking Boston No. 1 out of 40 fashion failed cities, comparing its style sense to a sewer drain populated with undergraduate "hoodie-monsters."

Emmi Sorokin, a men's image consultant and founder of It's a Man's World, said GQ isn't far off.

Sorokin said there is a time and place for sports gear and sweats — like a Sox game.

"When you're out and about you never know who you will meet," said Sorokin. "So you don't want to dress schleppy."

With a touch of education a guy can have a stylish look that is no harder to put together than the hoodie-and-athletic-socks getup synonymous with Boston's bros, she said.

"Boston is a culture that never progresses. It's always hoodies and jeans."
NATASHA, 23

Last week's Web post also said females were fault.

GQ said Beantown ladies are easily impressed with the hoodie-wearing boys that pass off sports-gear as fashion.

They even pegged the city's princesses as unfortunates "who don't realize that leggings-as-pants were supposed to be paired with tops large enough to conceal their camel toes."

Kelsey Mason, 21, a student, said GQ's opinion is skewed because it only looks at campus clothing trends.

"Student fashion can be low, but it's pretty upscale once you leave that age group," she said.

Sédat Firat, 32, a design consultant, didn't let his fellow males off the hook.

"In general people get more comfortable everyday," he said. "It is becoming too casual."

2. Crocs: "Avoid these cheese-holed shoes at all cost."

4. Dress shirts and jeans: "You wear a dress shirt with dress slacks."
5. Pleated khaki shorts with workout sneakers: "Stick to street-kicks, boys."

Weekend marred by boat accidents

Police resume search for missing 23-year-old man yesterday Speedboat breaks apart near Boston Light

State and local police took to the waters off of Marshfield again yesterday to search for a 23-year-old man who fell overboard from a boat.

It is the second disastrous boating incident this weekend in the waters off of Massachusetts.

The first incident took place Saturday afternoon when one man was killed and another severely injured when the boat they were riding in near Boston Light broke apart.

Just hours later, at about 8:20 p.m., the state police air wing assisted Marshfield police and fire personnel in searching for the man who fell overboard near the Brant Rock section of town.

▶ Not this boat

A second person also went overboard, but that person was pulled from the water.

Police charged the boat's driver, Justin McDonald, 22, Saturday night with operating under the influence, WCVB reported.

A backpack belonging to the missing man was located, but he was still not found as of press time.

Deadly crash

- Police are investigating why a 30-foot speedboat broke apart and capsized Saturday afternoon as it traveled near the Boston Harbor islands.
- The men were thrown from the boat. One of them was pronounced dead after being removed from the water and taken to shore.
- The second man was flown by helicopter from Hull to Boston with a severe chest injury.

Text-a-Tip campaign goes into full gear

Mayor Thomas Menino and Police Commissioner Ed Davis are again promoting the "Text-a-Tip" program to get more clues to crimes in the city, this time with more aggressive advertising.

Posters and billboards will soon go up in MBTA cars and at 50 bus shelters around Boston to target areas that have been plagued by violence this summer.

The initiative encourages citizens to send in information they may know about unsolved crimes.

A PSA will also be airing on the Fenway Jumbotron during Red Sox pregames for the rest of the season and police will distribute 5,000 brochures throughout the community.

▶ Soccer fans and members of the Boston Breakers celebrate a U.S. goal during the World Cup final yesterday.

Hoping that World Cup is a winner for women's soccer in US

The agonizing World Cup finish may be forgotten in a few days, but some fans and players are hoping that yesterday's thrilling final will help raise the game's popularity from the basement of professional sports.

"So many famous people have been tweeting about it. It just helps people tune in to this game and hopefully ticket sales will go up," said Boston Breakers midfielder Niki Cross.

Cross and about a half dozen of her fellow Breakers were seated at a long table at Tommy Doyle's in Harvard Square to watch the game. Surrounding them were more than 100 fans who threw their hands in the air with every close shot and broke into brief chants of "USA! USA!"

Manager Garrett Tingle said yesterday's game crowd was about double the turnout on an average Sunday.

Becky Bernat of Jamaica Plain and her friends showed up nearly two hours before game time. She said she was interested in watching the game, but also showed up because of the good food.

Her friend, Susan Rice, also of Jamaica Plain, was the true fan, they said.

Rice wore her autographed Brandi Chastain jersey and said that the recent championship play of the women is helping the sport overall.

"It's always good for the sport when they win," she said.

Derailment strands passengers

For the second time in a week, an MBTA train got stuck underground, forcing riders to evacuate through the tunnels to safety.

On Saturday around 6 p.m., a Green Line train traveling outbound toward Kenmore Station got lodged underground after it derailed, according to an MBTA spokesperson.

The trolley derailment happened between Hynes and Kenmore stations.

The MBTA called it a "minor" derailment, but all passengers had to be evacuated through Kenmore Station.

Bus shuttle service was provided for passengers, who sent angry tweets and took pictures as they fled through the underground passageway.

It took the MBTA two hours to address the derailment.

Last week, two Red Line cars got caught beneath the surface for nearly three hours, with more than 400 passengers trapped inside, when both trains stalled out in Porter Square.

UK's top police chief quits over hacking scandal

Allegations swirl that officers accepted money from News of the World to ignore hacking charges ● Former head of Murdoch's papers arrested

Britain's top police chief resigned and the former head of Rupert Murdoch's U.K. newspaper business was arrested yesterday over a phone-hacking scandal that has rocked pillars of the establishment.

Paul Stephenson, London's police commissioner, quit in the face of allegations that police officers had accepted money from Murdoch's News of the World paper and not done enough to investigate phone-hacking charges.

Stephenson said he did not want questions about his leadership to undermine the enormous challenge confronting the police in providing security for the Olympic Games in London next year.

"I had no knowledge of the extent of this disgraceful practice (of phone-hacking) and the repugnant nature of the selection of victims that is now emerging," Stephenson said in a televised statement.

Stephenson's resignation and the arrest of Rebekah Brooks, one of Murdoch's top lieutenants, were the latest twists in a scandal that has tainted police and politicians and shaken the tycoon's global media empire.

The scandal has shocked the public and raised concerns not only about unethical media practices but about the influence Murdoch has wielded over British leaders and allegations of cozy relationships between some of his journalists and police.

Brooks and Rupert and James Murdoch are due to be questioned in Britain's parliament tomorrow. REUTERS

Panel: No offenses at Dow Jones

No illegal activities have taken place at Dow Jones & Co., the News Corp. unit that publishes the Wall Street Journal, according to an independent panel tasked with overseeing the integrity of the newspaper.

The panel said in a statement released on Friday: "[None of the] London offenses or anything like them have taken place at Dow Jones." REUTERS

What about her?

Several sources familiar with the situation said Rebekah Brooks, 43, was being questioned as part of an investigation into allegations of illegal voicemail interception and police bribery at the News of the World tabloid she once edited.

Brooks quit as chief executive of News International, the British unit of Murdoch's News Corp., Friday, but has denied she knew of the alleged hacking of thousands of phones, including that of a murdered schoolgirl.

The flame-haired Brooks became the focus of widespread anger over the phone-hacking scandal, but was initially protected by Murdoch, who guided her rise through the male-dominated world of U.K. tabloid journalism to become editor of the News of the World in 2000 and the Sun's first female editor in 2003.

LA's 'Carmageddon' never materializes; work ends early

A key Los Angeles freeway closed for construction work was set to reopen about 16 hours ahead of schedule yesterday, bringing an early end to a much-hyped "Carmageddon" traffic crisis that never materialized, officials said.

Heat wave moving to East Coast

An oppressive and potentially deadly summertime mix of sizzling temperatures and high humidity baked a large swath of the United States yesterday, pushing afternoon heat indexes in dozens of cities to dangerous levels.

Forecasters warned the heat wave would persist through much of the coming week and cautioned residents in more than three dozen states to take extra precautions.

While the heat wave is currently focused on the High Plains and Mississippi Valley, it is expected to press east by the middle of the week, the weather service said.

By midweek, many locations on the East Coast will have heat index values approaching or exceeding 100 degrees, including Washington, D.C., the weather service said. REUTERS

Life at the top means stress

Alpha male baboons more prone to stress than their inferiors, study suggests Leading primates exert more energy to maintain social rank, researcher says

Those wielding power and influence are more likely to lead a "stressful" life, according to new research on wild baboons.

Researchers at Princeton University discovered that alpha males among the wild yellow baboons of Kenya's Amboseli Basin have higher levels of glucocorticoid, a stress hormone, as well as testosterone.

"We found that alpha male baboons exhibit much higher stress hormone levels than beta (second-ranking) males, indicating that being at the very top of a social hierarchy may be more costly than previously thought," lead author Laurence Gesquiere told Metro.

The study is based on the examination of fecal samples from 125 adult baboons over a nine-year period. "Life at the top: rank and stress in wild male baboons" is to be published in a forthcoming issue of academic journal Science.

The baboons' high stress levels are most likely due to the energy they exert to maintain their social position, Gesquiere added, with alpha males being more prone to fighting and protecting their mate, as opposed to beta males.

"Where high status comes with both high costs and high benefits and associated physiological stress in human or nonhuman societies, the consequences may either be a shortening of tenure in such positions or a cumulative 'wear and tear' that compromises long-term health and survival," said Gesquiere.

THE WORD

Metro's Monica Weymouth shares her take on the world of gossip @monicaatmetro monica.weymouth@metro.us

Dorothy Robinson will return tomorrow.

Jennifer Lopez, Marc Anthony call it quits

In not altogether shocking celebrity breakup news, Jennifer Lopez and Marc Anthony announced that they were parting ways on Friday.

"We have decided to end our marriage," the couple said in a joint statement. "This was a very difficult decision. We have come to an amicable conclusion on all matters. It is a painful time for all involved, and we appreciate the respect of our privacy at this time."

If this happened last year, we probably would have respected that request. But sorry, JLo — once you signed on to "American Idol" and entered the reality TV machine, you forfeited all rights to privacy in the face of divorce, addiction and holiday weight gain.

We'll still give you a courtesy pass on red carpet wardrobe malfunctions, but we're eagerly anticipating when this PR speak ends and Jenny From the Block surfaces.

▶ As bored and awkward as they usually seemed on the red carpet, Jennifer Lopez and Marc Anthony looked great together performing on the "American Idol" finale in May.

Mueller recovering in ... Cancun?

After getting thrown off a Mexico-bound flight last week, Brooke Mueller is checking in to a Cancun-based rehab facility, reports TMZ. Apparently, it's because they prescribe Ibogaine — a plant-derived drug that's not legal in the States — to treat alcohol and drug addictions (and, hopefully, Charlie Sheen relapses).

We hope she gets the treatment she needs. But Cancun? Come on, girl. That's like moving to Philadelphia to lose weight.

Timberlake also attending Marine Ball

His "Friends With Benefits" co-star Mila Kunis accepted an invite to the Marine Corps Ball, and now it seems Justin Timberlake will be on the guest list as well. After Cpl. Kelsey De Santis asked him out over YouTube, he accepted: "And not because she had all those beefcake military guys behind her to try to intimidate me — although that probably would have worked by itself. I don't get asked out ever! So I was very flattered by that," he tells UsMagazine.com.

Justin, consider this your formal invitation to the Metro Christmas party. What we lack in open bars, we make up for in desk whiskey.

Talking points

Hiltons have to pay up

Paris Hilton's little brother, Barron Hilton, is still being haunted by his day of reckless driving in 2008, during which the then-19-year-old was arrested for driving while intoxicated and allegedly struck Fernando Tellez, a gas station attendant, with his car. Now a jury has ruled that Barron must pay Tellez $4.9 million in damages, according to TMZ. "We disagree with the jury," a source close to the defendant says. "Barron did not strike the attendant. Barron knows he did wrong. It happened three years ago and he's been incredibly responsible ever since."

Barron Hilton

David digging the pink

David Beckham is over the moon about having newborn daughter Harper home. "To have that little bundle of joy in your hands and her making her little noises and opening her eyes — it really is an incredible moment for us," he says in a chat with fans on his Facebook page. But that doesn't mean having a girl in the house hasn't called for some adjustments: "Having a daughter is a whole new thing," he says. "Having pink in the house and lilac in the house. And you have to be a lot more delicate with girls and I'm not used to that so it's a whole new experience but it's an amazing experience."

▶ Paquin

Anna Paquin: Who cares?

"True Blood" star Anna Paquin is more than happy to discuss her bisexuality after coming out last year. "My sexuality is something I'm completely comfortable with and open about," she tells V magazine. "There is a lot of prejudice against us, but the more people talk about it, the less of a deal it will be. Who people choose to sleep with — or spend their lives with — shouldn't matter, not that anyone particularly cares who I'm attracted to."

'Engaging with the world again'

● Cass McCombs on private investigators and reaching 'Wit's End' ● Which comes first, the tune or the words?

Cass McCombs is renowned for the way he deals with the press almost as much as he is for his finely crafted songs. For a period of time, the singer and songwriter demanded that interviews be conducted via mail. No, not e-mail: actual mail. But McCombs is talking to press again, at a time when his music is so good that it speaks for itself. With his new album, "Wit's End," it sounds like he spent some time in the Leonard Cohen school of songwriting. The songs ease their way into your consciousness with a wounded elegance and delicate beauty. And after all the hubbub about him not being a great conversationalist, we found him surprisingly forthcoming.

PAUL VALENCIA

▶ Judging from this photo, it seems like Cass McCombs was telling the truth about private investigators following him.

How does it feel to be talking to us press folk again?
It's cool. I never really learned how to do it in the first place. I don't know if you know, but my record company hired a private investigator to take photos of me, when I wasn't aware of that.

Are you serious?
I'm not kidding. … It was kind of a wake-up call to start engaging with the world again.

The songs on this album definitely have the feel of somebody who isn't used to engaging with the world. How does it feel to take those songs of solitude to people? That must be an odd transition.
Music is surprising, because there are so many different components. There's the lyrics, which I usually find the most important. But when you add a band on top of that, they have their own interpretations, musically. And then the crowd has their interpretations. So I mean, music grows. The writing of it is just the first step. And I try to write so it implies things that excite people's imaginations, so they create their own meaning anyway.

You mentioned that lyrics are the most important to you. Do they always come first?
Some are lyric-oriented and some I'll just be jamming on a guitar and a word will pop into a riff that you play. Riffs are kind of like syllables, so they kind of speak to you.

Our lawsuits claim that various adult entertainment clubs require exotic dancers to pay a "house fee" to work and share their tips and earnings with other workers in violation of the Massachusetts tip statute. Our lawsuits also claim that various clubs have misclassified their dancers as "independent contractors", failed to pay minimum wage and provide other benefits as required under Massachusetts Law. Slipknot singer Corey Taylor discusses 'Deadly' new book

Corey Taylor tries to settle the argument between born bad and damaged good Yes, it has stories about life on the road, but it also makes you think

He's led a wild life as the lead singer of hard rock bands Slipknot and Stone Sour, but Corey Taylor is also surprisingly sensitive. The 37-year-old's first book, "Seven Deadly Sins" — dedicated to his children, wife and grandmother — is an in-depth argument for the redefinition of sin, meshed with personal stories from his childhood and career.

FOR THE COMPLETE INTERVIEW, VISIT WWW.METRO.US/BOOKS

How is your book different from other rock-star books?
I wrote it myself — that's probably a huge difference. A lot of people think that just sitting down with someone who's punching letters into a computer counts as writing your own book, but I completely disagree. I felt I had a very relevant thing to say and I could use my own life as examples, so I can only hope that people take a lot of different things away from it than just stories of when I was growing up or stories of being on the road.

If you write a second book, any idea what it will be about?
I'm gonna keep that under wraps for right now. ... Oh, OK, fine I'll tell you. Basically, it'll be a collection of stories, the difference between believing in the paranormal or the supernatural, versus believing in God and having faith. Like, how can I believe in ghosts when I don't believe in God?

What will you tell your kids if they want to read your book?
What I would say to my kids is like, "Look: Don't miss the point of what this book is supposed to be. It's supposed to be talking about being human, making mistakes and ... striving to be a better person. And [it's about] using these 'sins,' these mistakes, to whittle away all the clay to get to what's inside, which is the beautiful sculpture, the beautiful piece of art, the human that you wanna be."

DUMB THINGS COLLECTORS SAY

By Robert Josephs

I'm Robert M Josephs, a consumer bankruptcy attorney with offices in Jamaica Plain and Waltham. I want to share some thoughts about debt collectors with you. As a consumer, the important thing for you to learn is that they don't have much power. As said by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself."

Since summer is coming, I'll lighten up a little and share some dumb things that collection agents have said to me in my years of being a consumer bankruptcy attorney. Once, years ago, I informed a Florida collection agency owner that his collection agency lacked the license required to collect debts in Massachusetts. He responded, "How can I know the laws in all 52 states?" 52? I think he missed a day in first grade.

Recently, I flatly told an Illinois collector that he lacked a license to perform Massachusetts collections. He said that I was wrong, that his agency had a license. I asked for his agency's Massachusetts debt collection license number, and he replied that he didn't say that they had a license for Massachusetts! These guys will argue about anything - even when they are violating the law.

Ask yourself whether you need to endure these people in your life. Or, would you rather take an affirmative step to be rid of them? It can be done, by considering the option of filing for bankruptcy.

Call me.

Valdettaro & Josephs is a debt relief agency. We help people file for bankruptcy relief under the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. (617) 522-3200.

Troubleshoot an interview

- It's unlikely that things will go perfectly smooth
- How to collect yourself and get back on your feet

Nobody is going to sugarcoat it: There are a million things that can go wrong on an interview. And you won't be able to recover from all of them. Some will give you nightmares for years to come. But for other common mistakes and tough questions, there are ways to bounce back.

We caught up with Lori Hourigan, a Philadelphia regional manager for specialized staffing firm Robert Half International, where they just surveyed hiring managers on the biggest interview blunders.

The problem: You're a nervous wreck.

What to do: You don't want to be shaking, but a little nervous energy can work for you — you're supposed to be nervous. In any case, it's better than the alternative. "There's a fine line between confidence and arrogance," says Hourigan. "Some people psych themselves up so much that they come off as arrogant."

The problem: You answered a question totally wrong.

What to do: An unfamiliar new suit and bad conference room lighting can make you say weird things. And while you can't un-say them, you can do some post-interview damage control in the thank you note, says Hourigan. (While she's on it: Yes, you do need to send one.)

The problem: You don't know the answer to a question.

What to do: Have absolutely no experience with HTML? Never wrote a grant proposal? Stop yourself before you try to gloss over it. "You can't fudge it if you don't know something. One of my clients is all about transparency," says Hourigan. "The person on the other side of the desk does this every day, and they know you don't know what you're talking about. It's better to say, 'I don't know, but I'd love to learn.'"

The problem: They want to know why you're leaving — and the answer isn't pretty.

What to do: It's important to stay positive and not bash your job, but also to give a legitimate answer that at least incorporates the truth. Hourigan recommends "opportunity for growth" over, say: "My job is mind-numbing and I'm slowly rotting at my desk." In this economy, it's also OK to mention job security. "We know some companies aren't doing well financially — you can say there's financial uncertainty," she says.

MONICA WEYMOUTH
monica.weymouth@metro.us

BRAND X PICTURES

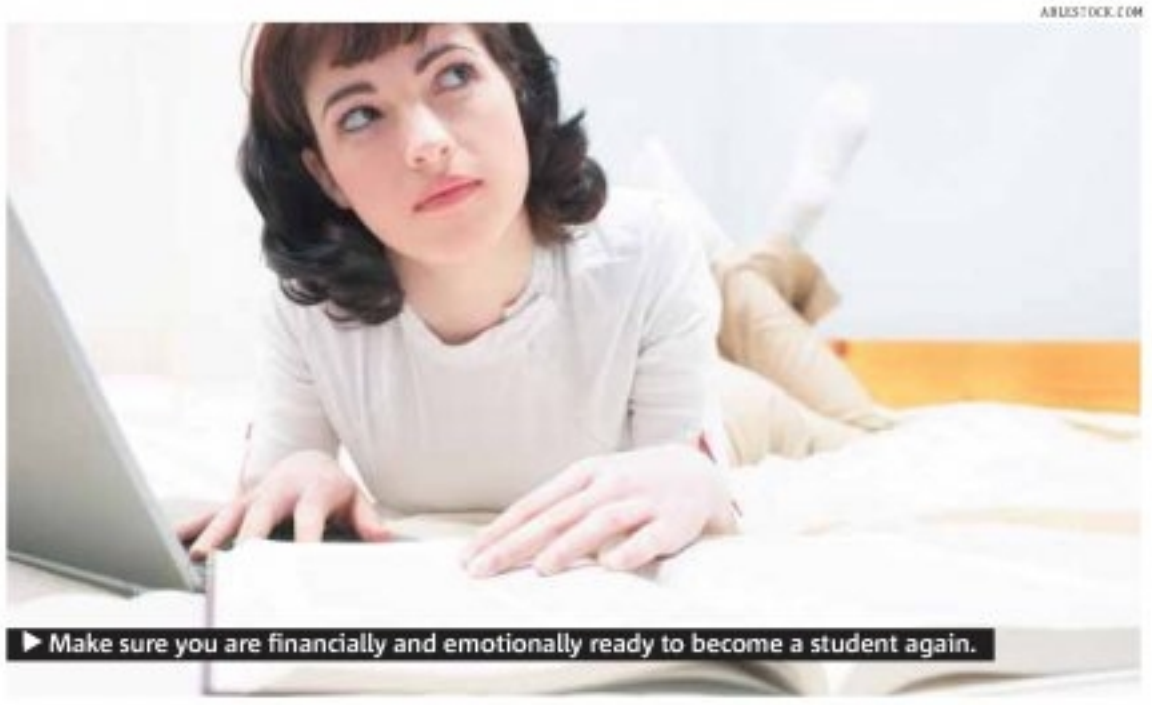
▶ Get a grip: You can make nerves work for you. Now, as for the perfume ...

Other common mistakes

- Wearing too much jewelry or perfume: "We tell people it's not a cocktail party," says Hourigan.
- Being too early: "It's important to show up on time, but if you show up an hour before, it doesn't help — it gets weird."
- Asking about the salary too soon: "Talking about money isn't a first-interview topic. You know what the range is or you wouldn't be there."
- Being rude to receptionist: "I've seen receptionists give a thumbs up or a thumbs down as they walk into an interview."

Thinking of heading back to school? What you need to think through first

ABLESTOCK.COM



▶ Make sure you are financially and emotionally ready to become a student again.

Nothing makes a campus lawn seem greener than an unsatisfying job — or no job at all. "There's certainly a lot of people who have chosen to [go back to school] in this economy," says CareerBuilder.com advisor Allison Nawoj.

But that doesn't mean you should necessarily join them. "First ask, 'Why are you thinking about going back to school?'" urges Natascha F. Saunders, founder of Youth Career Coaching. "If it's just, 'I can't find a job,' that's not good enough. You're spending so much time learning new curriculum that you're going to be frustrated if it's not truly a desire for you to get those additional skills."

Master's tip

At some point, you'll likely need a master's degree in many fields, Saunders says. The killer question is when. "Find some key people in that sector and interview them: Do they have an advanced degree? If so, when did they get it? See some data, some facts on what is the norm, before you jump right in."

Before you enroll full-time: "Take a few courses to test something out," Nawoj encourages.

"There's all kinds of continuing-education and evening courses offered at universities," she adds. "Instead of enrolling at a formal program, that's a great way to get your feet wet."

Consider your study habits — are you emotionally ready? "People forget how you fall out of study mode," Saunders stresses. "When you've been away for a long period of time, it's hard to get started. But if you feel like you're in that zone, ready to hit the books, then go for it."

Disrupting in order to innovate

- Using a business theory, 'The Innovative University' looks to make higher education more accessible
- What that means for research and graduate studies
- And how BYU is already ahead of the game

Clayton M. Christensen is best known for the business theory of "disruptive innovation," which he developed in the '90s while teaching at Harvard. The model looks to explain product developments that typically occur on the low end of the market, where market pressures force competitors to find new ways of creating a product or delivering a service.

Now he wants to bring this theory to higher education. His new book, "The Innovative University: Changing the DNA of Higher Education From the Inside Out," is co-authored with Brigham Young University-Idaho administrator Henry J. Eyring. The book focuses on the transformation of Mormon church-owned Ricks College into BYU-Idaho, a process that started in 2000.

From the start, BYU-Idaho implemented some radical changes: They axed athletic programs. They offered classes year-round. They did not seek research dollars or attempt to create graduate programs. They expanded online learning.

www.metro.us

VISIT US ONLINE FOR MORE

For Christensen and Eyring, this is the blueprint for better undergraduate education in the U.S. It's the "disruptive innovation" on the low end of the market that will eventually transform the whole. "In the 1970s, the Carnegie Foundation created a classification system: They distinguished top-tier research universities from non-research-based schools," says Eyring. "It supercharged the desire to become bigger and better. That process has led to great research, but it's also increased the price of a college education and left fewer institutions focused on being affordable and accessible to undergrads."

▶ Want more expert advice? Bailo's new book, "The Essential Phone Interview Handbook," is available now.

4 Steps to acing a phone interview

This seemingly simple chat is anything but Paul Bailo, CEO of Phone Interview Pro, on how to make it through the toughest type of interview

Take advantage of your home court

"A phone interview is like an open-book test — have everything in front of you," says Bailo of your resume and any written questions you have for the hiring manager. "The other thing we tell people is to go on LinkedIn and have a picture of the person interviewing you in front of you. It brings it down to a more personal, human level."

Put down your cell phone

It doesn't so much matter where you do the interview as what you do it on: namely, on a designated landline. "Some people feel comfortable on their office phone, some people feel more comfortable in the kitchen. But no cell phone," says Bailo. "People who are looking for a job need to have a Batphone. And that phone number is only given out to people who are looking to interview you."

Be yourself

"The No. 1 problem is: People aren't themselves on phone interviews. They try to be someone they're not," says Bailo.

This is especially harmful, because the person on the other end doesn't have any other way to relate to you. Accents, he notes, can work in your favor, because they create a point of interest for the person on the other end of the line.

"With the phone interview, you lose 80 percent of your communication. All your social cues are gone. They only thing you have to work with is your voice. What you say, how you say it, all matter," Bailo says.

Play hard to get

Interviewing, unfortunately, is a lot like dating.

"Don't pick up the phone on the first ring. For a scheduled phone interview, the second or third ring is safe. But if you miss the fourth ring, let it go to the answering machine. By the fourth, they're not happy with you. Give them 30 seconds, then call them back with a business explanation. Now, they've switched modes and they'll appreciate you calling them back."

A call to ban foie gras

RE: GETTING LOST IN LOT VALLEY, 7/12: I was dismayed to read in the travel article on Lot Valley in France that you recommend trying foie gras. The suggestion is accompanied by a photo of beautiful white ducks. Why not show readers a photo of a duck with a pipe pushed down his throat, which happens several times daily as cornmeal is force-fed into his stomach so that his liver can grow five to 10 times its proper size? The inhumane practice has been banned in many countries, but foie gras is still served and sold locally after efforts to ban it failed. If your favorite restaurants or grocers offer it, please ask them to stop — there are delicious vegan alternatives.

ROSA MICHNYA, VIA E-MAIL

Obama being judged unfairly

In his first term, President Obama's performance on the economy is being judged unfairly. When he took office, the challenge was to stop the 600,000 to 700,000 per month job loss and avert the second Great Depression and its predicted 25 percent unemployment rate. Has he accomplished these goals? Yes, yes and yes!

GLENN HAYES, VIA E-MAIL

Re: King of his own castle

Perhaps we should blame the intransigence of House Republicans [for the current financial crisis] instead of President Obama. They should stop blindly idolizing Reagan and actually follow in his footsteps. Not only did he raise the debt ceiling, but taxes during his presidency were also much higher than they are now. I understand that Democrats hate Republicans, and Republicans hate Democrats, but for once can politicians stop seeing red states and blue states and just see American states? Our country deserves better than petty political gamesmanship.

CHRISTOPHER BLACKETT, VIA E-MAIL

Ten years have passed in vain

As we approach the 10th anniversary of Sept. 11, does it make anyone else sick that, despite the worst failure in history of the military to protect American civilians and the worst alleged engineering failures in history, there were no consequences for the responsible authorities, and no honest investigations?

ALL HOPE IS LOST

Americans' Women's World Cup run ends in choke, disappointment ◐ Two blown leads against Japan too much to overcome ◐ Lose in PKs

Time after time yesterday, the Women's World Cup was within reach for the U.S. national team.

Winning, it seemed, was as simple as burying an open shot from close range.

The Americans whiffed.

The U.S. blew opportunity after opportunity in the first half of the final against Japan, then gave away 1-0 and 2-1 leads on their way to a 3-1 PK loss.

"It's obviously heartbreaking," said U.S. striker Abby Wambach, who put the Americans ahead in extra time. "Japan played well. They never gave up."

The U.S. didn't, either. But the finishing failed.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Hope Solo made another shootout save against Japan yesterday. But she was bested by counterpart Ayumi Kaihori, who allowed just one U.S. goal in PKs.

The defending failed. The goalkeeping failed.

And the Americans' dreams of a third world title ended up in a Frankfurt dumpster, trumped by Japan's inspiring run in the wake of this spring's earthquake and tsunami.

The Japanese refused to cave after U.S. goals in the 69th and 104th minutes, equalizing in the 81st and 117th. The Americans had nothing left by the time PKs rolled around, missing their first three tries.

So, what's next for the U.S.?

Most of the core will be back for next year's London Olympics, though it's unclear how much longer stalwarts Christie Rampone and Wambach will stick around. And with teams like Japan, Brazil and France rising fast, the U.S. doesn't exactly have an easy path to a third straight gold medal.

The next major competition after that is the 2015 Women's World Cup, in Canada. METRO

The Americans took 21 shots yesterday to Japan's 11. But they hit the post three times and missed the net on a number of relatively simple opportunities.

Twitter reaction

The tournament was a hit on social media. Here's some post-loss reaction.

Team USA-you made us proud and will continue to inspire girls & women on and off the field

U.S. men's player Jozy Altidore (@JozyAltidore17)
These girls have nothing to be ashamed of. They brought the country together today and put on a show this whole tournament.

This week for the Red Sox

David Ortiz is having a vintage season for Boston.

Orioles next

- The Red Sox wrapped up a three-game set against Tampa Bay late last night. They're at Baltimore for three starting today. The last-place Orioles (38-54) snapped their nine-game losing streak Saturday with a win over Cleveland, and showed some offense in another 'W' yesterday afternoon.

Wake up

- Tim Wakefield is today's scheduled starter for the Sox. He's 5-3 on the season with a 4.74 ERA — but has contributed a lot more than the stats show. Not many teams have a No. 6 starter nearly as fine. He'll go for win No. 199 against Baltimore right-hander Brad Bergesen (1-6, 5.65 ERA).

Friday at Fenway

- Boston returns to Fenway Park for a three-game set against Seattle starting Friday. The Mariners (43-52) are a midtable team in the AL West. After Seattle leaves town on Sunday, the Sox will stick around the Hub for four against the lowly Royals, who are running fifth in the AL Central.

Truly the pants of a champion.

Clarke wins one for the everyman

'Bloke' takes British Open by three strokes • Edges out charging Mickelson, Johnson for first major

Sitting with the Claret Jug to one side and a pint of Guinness on the other, Darren Clarke basked in the glory of a British Open triumph that will be celebrated by ordinary golfers all over the world.

"I'm a bit of a normal bloke, aren't I?" Clarke said. "I like to have a pint, I like to go the pub and have a pint, jump on Easy Jet, fly home, buy everybody a drink. I'm just a normal guy playing golf, having a bit of fun."

Clarke said he prepared for the final round by enjoying a good meal and some "very nice" red wine. Known for his love of expensive cigars and a few pints of Ireland's most famous liquid export, the 42-year-old said his three-stroke win over Phil Mickelson and Dustin Johnson might interfere with a planned weight-loss program.

"I'll probably get bored with it in a week and give up," Clarke said.

"I think this could probably be a bad week for me to try and start."

We are gathered here today to tell you that you could win $25,000 toward your wedding (congratulations!) or your divorce (congratulations!).

All you have to do is create a video with your significant other that impresses our judges and tells how Miracle Whip impacts your relationship. We know we're not for everyone, so sometimes we can start trouble. Or become the catalyst of a storybook romance. Then upload your video to miraclewhip.com to begin the judge impressing.

Does your love of Miracle Whip create a super strong bond with the love of your life that no sandwich could pull apart? Tell us how, and use that $25,000 toward the best wedding cake ever or a gold-plated wedding dress. Or has Miracle Whip created an irreparable rift in your relationship? We want to hear about that stuff too. The $25,000 could come in handy for legal fees or a new apartment.

So grab a video camera and start making the most epic video we've ever seen. And if you want to take a break and make a sandwich, go right ahead. We're nothing if not understanding.

Good luck, you crazy kids.
